Christmas Time

By Dorothy B. Killian

FOUR days before Christmas Margaret looked at the calendar on the kitchen wall and sighed. For the first time she began to regret that she had brought the children to Homeville this fall. After all, she had decided for several reasons, that it would be a good idea to leave the city. The insurance money would go further—she wouldn't feel the pressure of keeping up the social life of their old friends. But now she stared at the clean little squares of the December page, empty except for the numbered numbers, and thought how their loneliness spelled loneliness.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

Eeny-meeny-
 miney-mo
 which of them would you let go?

Sometimes in its enthusiasm for a NEW industry, a community forgets industries already there.

Large or small, these industries, too, are important. All contribute in some way to the well-being of the community. Each dollar paid in wages, whether there are few employees or many—each tax payment—every contribution of time or money or service to church or club or civic cause—every purchase of local product or services—all of these things contribute directly or indirectly to the social, cultural or economic well-being of the community.

So—eeny-meeny-miney-mo, which of them would you let go?

This advertisement published by Alabama Power Company during Alabama Industry Week as a reminder that industry of whatever size already located in Alabama is as important as new industry. Let's not lose a one!

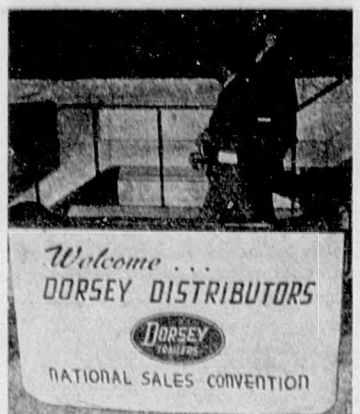

We ARE firm believers in seeking new industry for Alabama. Our experience in that field proves that one of the strong inducements for a new industry to locate in Alabama is a favorable public attitude toward existing industry.

THE ELBA CLIPPER

Thursday, April 28, 1955

Horion Pick pointed the way to profit in his talk before the first morning session of Dorsey's 1955 National Convention held in Pensacola recently.

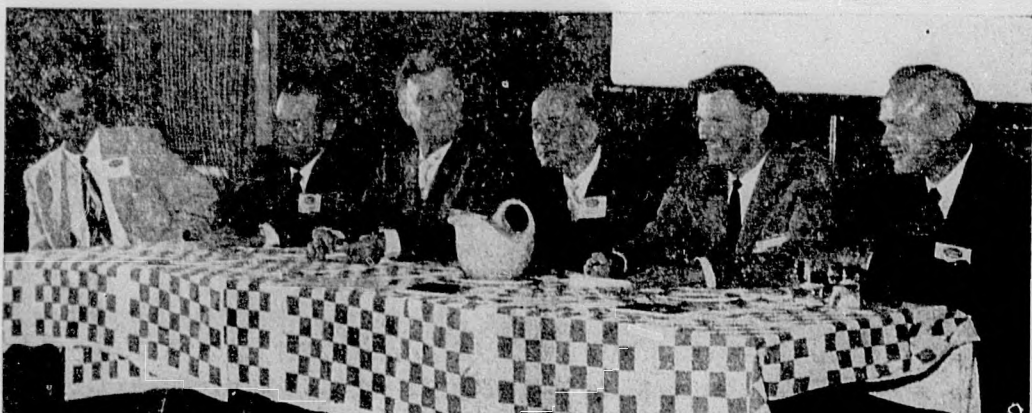

There's a Dorsey for Any Load

Elba's Dorsey and Horion Pick are shown talking before the Dorsey Complete line was reported recently for this demonstration.

Information Please—And There Was Plenty of It

This management group appeared before the Dorsey distributors at the convention and discussed opinions on subjects ranging from the need for pole trailer literature to a training school at Elba for salesmen. Left to right, John Kendrick, assistant to the president; C. E. Dorsey, president; J. V. Wright, vice president; Noah Norman, chief engineer; George Collier, cost accountant; and Al Sewell, operation engineer.

Claude Dorsey, Fleming, Robertson and J. V. Wright are shown at the convention.

Ladies Appear on "Tea Time on TV"

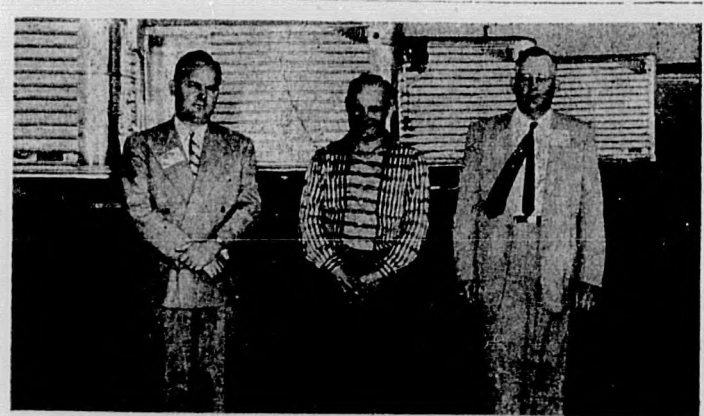

"Tea Time on TV" is one of the most popular afternoon programs of Pensacola's station, WEAR-TV. On Thursday afternoon the ladies were guests of Kay Edwards, program master of ceremonies, and Millie Long, program hostess. For an hour they regaled the TV audience with information, anecdotes and stories about their visit to Elba and the making and the making and selling of Dorsey Trailers by their husbands. At the end of the program Mr. Edwards let them know that the business sessions in downtown Pensacola had been interrupted so that their husbands could watch the program. Photos were made in WEAR-TV studios during the program.

Convention Fun Shared with the Ladies

The Dorsey Trailers 1955 National Sales Convention was not all work. In this column are the photographed highlights showing Elba people at the social occasions. There was a dinner and dance in the San Carlos ball room, a visit to Martine's where the food was fine and a cruise on the Gulf.

The ladies enjoyed a lunch and fashion show at the Pensacola Beach Women's Club.

At left is Kimmey Dorsey, assistant sales manager; El Wade of Providence, R. I., and Henry Dorsey, in charge of inspection at the Elba factory.

WHAT ALABAMA MAKES MAKES ALABAMA

And Elba's Manufacturing Payrolls Are the Economic Lifeblood of the Town

Accomplishments Told

Along with the industrial growth of the State of Alabama and the nation, Dorsey Trailers has made a tremendous gain in production since 1939. Figures show a continued expansion and growth that has made itself felt in all segments of the local economy. As Dorsey's and other industry in the town grew, workers received more money. Then they were enabled to buy more food and Alabama-made products.

The sale of food gave the farmer more money. The sale of extra products made the Alabama industries prosper more. This, in turn, brought more money into circulation in a cycle of prosperity.

As the number of persons employed by industry in Elba grew, a need for more services and retail outlets was created. Consequently since 1939 many new stores have opened in Elba to make the town a better shopping center and provide a wider variety of services. We at Dorsey Trailers are proud of the part we have played in the growth of Elba.

Dorsey's Future Looks Bright

The year 1955 is likely to go down in plant history as one of the best we have ever experienced. A steady flow of orders from throughout the United States has made it necessary for us to hire additional help in order to speed production and meet the demand for our products.

This bright picture for the future is naturally tied in closely with the overall economic picture in the United States. At the same time Dorsey Trailers are being more widely purchased in the trucking industry because they are standing up under all kinds of operating conditions. A well made product, skillfully engineered and made by craftsmen who are your neighbors has an importance in making our and Elba's future look bright. In any undertaking, it takes team play to bring success. With capital provided by the management and craftsmanship by men building the trailers, Dorsey Trailers looks to an even more prosperous future than ever before. This prosperity is being shared with men in the plant through our profit-sharing plan and is dollars and cents evidence of our spirit of team play.

Plant Safer than Average Home

Alva Devane and others like him at Dorseys do not consider their homes dangerous but the fact is that they may be safer while working than when at home.

On the job, safety is engineered into the operation, safety is talked, safety courses are conducted and safety posters are put up throughout the plant. Everywhere a man is warned to be careful. At home you relax. Suddenly you lean to far over on a chair. Wh-a-am, you hit the floor. It is a fact that more accidents happen in the home than anywhere else.

Dorsey Trailers found long ago that it paid to keep workers healthy and uninjured. As a result, they have hired a full-time registered nurse to look after preventive health measures and be on the scene quickly in case of injury. Also every man in the plant is protected under workmen's compensation insurance. And when a worker reaches retirement age, he will benefit from the Retirement Program set up for him.

Big Things in Store for Enterprise Ledger

Big changes are on tap at the Enterprise Ledger according to an article in the March issue of the Alabama Publisher, official publication of the Alabama Press Association. Martin Meadows, president and publisher of the corporation at the time of the merger, was quoted as saying, "In the not too distant future the Ledger will probably be published twice-a-week. After that we are shooting for a five-day-a-week paper, possibly within a few years."

While Meadows has since been replaced as president and publisher of the Enterprise Ledger, Inc., it seems hardly likely he could have made the statement without getting it cleared with management personnel of Dixie Newspapers, Inc. who own half the stock of the Ledger.

Claude McEwen has taken over the post of publisher and president of the Enterprise Ledger. While we have not had the opportunity of meeting Mr. McEwen, we welcome him to Coffee County and hope he enjoys his associations here as much as we are enjoying ours. There are some mighty fine folks living here.

Anyway, we will be looking forward to seeing how and when the Ledger carries out its expansion plans.

National Guard Battery Has Grown with the Times

Last week after reading "23 Years Ago" in the Clipper, Lewey Stephens, circuit solicitor and captain of the National Guard Battery here, came up with some interesting comparisons. Taking the figures published for 1932, he matched them against "operating expenses" of the unit as it is organized today.

When Charles Rowe commanded the battery, the unit's equipment consisted of four 75mm guns with caissons and limbers and all other necessary accessories for the organization besides small arms. Now the unit has 105mm howitzers with another three pair caissons.

Twenty-two horses in the unit have been replaced with four 2 1/2 ton trucks, three 3 1/2 ton trucks and three jeeps. Caissons and limbers have become museum pieces. Anyone who ever has ridden a caisson across an open field will never regret seeing them go. Nor will the men who rode a pair of the six horses in the team that pulled a gun for old "Battery D" regret the passing of this method of transportation.

One eight-week training period at Ft. Riley, Kansas in the horse artillery taught this writer as valuable lesson on the real worth of a 1 1/2 ton truck for a prime mover. As the rider on the swing pin middle of two of six horses pulling a 75mm gun it was rough to ride 20 miles in the prairie sun on an all-day training march, come in from camp at night and have to ride down a pair of sweaty horses before getting any sleep except a drink of hot water out of a canteen. Charles Rowe, Thomas Bryan and others who went through this type training probably have no nostalgia for the "good old days" either. Traces linking the horses to the gun had a bad habit of wearing the riders ankle in two or hitting the flanks of the spooked horse he was riding. Riding one of the "off horses" with a set of reins provided its serious moments on difficult draft when six horses, three men, limber and caisson tangled up in a maze of traces at the bottom of a ditch.

In just about every phase of operations, Battery A of the 93rd FA Bn. has it over the old Battery D. The fact that things are better now is no reflection on officers and men of the old organization but the result of changing times.

Value of equipment in the unit commanded by Charles Rowe was $50,000. Capt. Lewey Stephens estimated the worth of his organization's ordnance at between $200,000 and $250,000. Where the guard used to spend $300 per month for maintenance of the roses, the present unit buys

Few people stop to realize the power-in a military unit such as the National Guard. But should things go wrong here, within 90 minutes the Guard could clamp a martial law on the town which would regulate every thing except the very breathes. By light and water plants, city hall and regulatory traffic on the highways, the town and its outlying areas would be completely under control. It is a comforting and sobering thought all in one. While this power has not been used or abused, it is still there.

One hour and 15 minutes after the alert was sounded by radio and telephone, seven officers, one warrant officer and 62 men from Battery A were at the armory. They were put on guard at strategic points such as the telephone exchange, power plant and city hall and road blocks were set up on all the main highways leading into town.

On one of the road blocks, a bus load of seniors from Ft. Deposit on their annual outing were stopped. Seven of the youths on board belonged to the Ft. Deposit unit so they reported to Capt. Stephens. Any man away from his home unit was ordered to report to the nearest outfit if he was far from his parent organization when the alert came.

Home Grid Games May Be Cut One Short This Fall

Local football fans might have their ration of home games cut one next fall if a suitable opponent for the Elba Tigers can't be found soon. Coaches Gaither and McCurley have filled out nine of the ten games on the schedule for next season. It includes five games away and four at home. Trouble now is they can't find another opponent who has an open date at the same time they do and who is willing to come to Elba to play.

Both Dothan and Greenville have incomplete schedules and could probably be ticketed. However, they want to play on their home fields, not Elba's.

Either team would make a worthy opponent and most likely draw a good crowd.

Hot Dogs—Billions of Them

Another baseball season is underway. In ball parks all over the country the crowds are turning out for the most typically American of sports.

A many delicacies are also typically American goes with baseball—as it goes with other diversions. That's the hot dog. Last year the total of 8,500,000 of these edible canines were consumed—which works out to a little more than one per person per week. It's very possible that the number will be larger still this year. And he hot dog's cousin, the frankfurter, is also being eagerly devoured in steadily increasing quantities.

Our devotion to the hot dog is symbolic of national tastes. We are a country of meat eaters. Save for a few countries such as Australia and Denmark, we lead the world in per capita meat production. Beef is now the favorite of all meats, having passed pork in 1953, and this year, each of us, on the average, will eat close to 77 pounds of it.

That indicates the tremendous challenge that the livestock and meat industry faces. Estimates say that 20 years from now our population will be 215 millions. These edible canines were consumed almost 50 million more than at present. If our present rate of meat consumption is to be maintained, production will have to be increased as much as 15 per cent over the next 15 years and 30 per cent over the next 20. This can be done on a free market and under a competitive system much better than under "government planning."
